The Leon Johnson With 20 Million Becomes 15th Producer at Woodhull

Newest well brought in with rotary equipment—John Cunningham's Jabe Johnson capped Friday with 8 million feet—Ackerman No. 2, cased ready to be drilled into the sand today or Friday.

Belmont's Leon Johnson well became the fifteenth producer in the Woodhull gas field this week when it was capped with a flow of 20 million cubic feet. The Leon Johnson was drilled in with rotary equipment, being the first well in the field finished in this manner.

John T. Cunningham's Jabe Johnson was capped Friday with a flow of 8 million feet. The Jabe Johnson is located at the far eastern side of the field where all wells drilled thus far have encountered a hard sand that has limited production.

Next well expected in this amazing field still less than six months old is the Edgar Ackerman No. 2 which is cased and may be drilled into the sand today. The Ackerman is another well on the east side of the field.

Becker's Fred Sly is down 3,400 feet and should be drilled to the sand next week. Fairman Brothers, drilling contractors on the Sly, encountered some difficulty a couple of days ago with a crooked hole in the Tully lime. However, the drillers reamed out the hole at that point and are now drilling in a straight hole.

Other wells nearing pay sand are the Charles Bonham, a New York Natural Gas Company well which is down 2,860 feet. North Penn's Mrs. Ed. Husted down 2,300 feet Wednesday and Williamsport Wire Rope Company's Hathaway down 2,500. The last named well is at present shut down. It was started with a light derrick, the owners making a contract for 2,500 feet of hole, after which a heavier rig was to be moved on the location. Up to yesterday the heavier rig had not been pulled to the well.

The Earle H. Brown well, owned and being drilled by the Southwestern Development Company, is down 1850 feet.

The newest well to start is the Martha Hargrave which was recently spudded in. Most operating companies are now planning no new wells in the field until the spring break-up.

Addison Stores Prepare For Holiday Sales

Many Addison stores are beginning to take on the Christmas holiday attire in preparation for the expected increase in business and requests for Christmas and seasonal merchandise.

Decorations have been placed in some of the places in anticipation of promoting Christmas business. In addition large stocks of gifts for the home, for wear and personal gifts have been secured in an effort to stimulate business.

Local merchants hope to sell local and vicinity people on the idea of "Shopping in Addison" this year instead of spending a great deal of money in other communities. It is true that certain types of merchandise cannot be bought in Addison. However many shoppers do not seek to buy here and oftentimes the merchandise they are seeking is on the shelves of local merchants.

Industrial conditions in vicinity factories have caused curtailment of some shopping at the present time but some of this can be offset by the increased return on milk this year over last year and which amount is being received by milk producers in this vicinity. This increase may in some measure compensate for the loss of industrial wages. Those merchants who strive for the rural trade will secure part of this increase.

IMPENDING LOCAL DANGER

Addison taxpayers have been matching dollars with the WPA to finish the dikes in this village, but the forces of nature have also been busy the past weeks. Along Tuscarora Creek the force of the stream current during recent high water has made a dangerous breach in the bottom of the dike, a breach which promises to soon widen until the weakened dike gives way entirely.

The chief damage to the dike has occurred at the sharp bend directly west of the end of Cleveland Street. Here the Tuscarora takes almost a right angle turn changing its direction from a northerly flow to cut due east, parallel with Tuscarora Street. But the fault is not so much in the construction of the dike itself as it is neglect in clearing the channel of the creek.

When work on the dikes started there was a low gravel bar in the middle of the channel north of the B. & O. railway bridge. Removal of this and other stream obstructions was supposed to be part of the flood control work here, and a little work was done on the bar some months ago. However the obstruction was nowhere near removed from the channel and the succeeding flows of high water which have come down the creek since the dike was erected have served to pile the gravel higher and higher so that it is now far larger than when the workmen started removing what little gravel was drawn away. In the beginning the stream flowed on both sides of this gravel bar, but as it has piled higher and higher the stream has been thrown more towards the east and this diversion of the current has forced it against the foot of the dike. The dike is now being cut away every time the water goes up, and with each recurrent freshet the dike becomes more and more weakened.

It is difficult to predict how long the dike will last with the gravel throwing the current against it. Yet anyone who has looked over the situation could hardly deny that two or three spurts of high water coming down the Tuscarora can hardly fail to tear out this section of the dike. When that happens—as it certainly will unless something is done—the residents on the south side will be in just the same flood pickle as they were before the dike was started.

This situation should certainly be rectified. While the power shovel is being used to load trucks for dike construction along the river, it should be kept busy in that creek channel. Get that gravel bar out before it is too late! Clearing the creek channel was one of the objectives of this project when it started, and probably it was the most important point in the whole program. Unless this problem is tackled witout delay the creek dike is doomed.

Residents of the south side will be just like the man doomed to die, who gets a two weeks reprieve in which to dread the the final hanging hour for just that much more time. These fellow citizens have seen a couple of floods diverted from their doors by the dike, it is true. But unless the gravel bar is removed that is only a brief reprieve, and when the dike cuts through they will get a more disastrous flooding than ever hit them before, for the water will sail down Cleveland street from the rent in the dike in a solid wall. And it will come too suddenly for them to have a chance to escape its path.

Death may add its toll to the property destruction now impending.

THE NEED FOR ACTION

No one begrudges the President his many vacations. His energy and activity are such that he needs frequent opportunities to recuperate. But it is most regrettable that he feels it important to go on a nine-day fishing trip at the precise moment of the nation's economic crisis.

The fact is unfortunate and the example is unfortunate. For what needs to be done if the Roosevelt depression is to be halted and industry turned upward once more, needs to be done at the earliest possible moment. Only three weeks remain in which Congress can act in the special session. The President has already interposed heavy obstacles to action upon essentials by insisting upon irrelevant and highly contentious legislation such as the farm bill and the wages-and-hours bill. True, the President is preparing certain minor pump-priming activities and a major house-building program is on his schedule. But these also are irrelevant to the main issue.

That is whether here and now, in time to effect business planning for the current year and for the year to come, the Administration and Congress will bestir themselves to free business from a definite and destructive restraint which the New Deal, in a punitive spirit, recklessly imposed. We mean the tax on the undistributed earnings of corporations. It is utterly unsound economically; it hampers and deranges the normal workings of finance, to the profound damage of society. It should be repealed at once and in toto. For this act of simple common sense debate is superfluous. The country has made up its mind and so has Congress. It is tragic that the President chooses to go fishing with only a vague and evasive commitment to tax revision some time on his tongue.

The repeal of this hampering tax will not solve the problem confronting business, labor and the country. But prompt action by Congress, regardless of the President's wishes or plans, would go far to answer the deeper question at stake. That is as to the future attitude of Washington in the next three years towards industry as a whole. The question here is not so much one of specific laws as of general outlook. The President has ridden to power—and into a depression—upon a policy of bitterness and hate, of setting class against class and punishing all who disagree with him. If that point of view is to continue to control Washington for the next three years, no temporary politeness born of necessity will do a particle of good to save the country from a major disaster.

What a heartening sign it would be, therefore, if Congress should calmly ignore the Presidential messages and swiftly repeal the surplus-profits tax! It might for good measure repeal the greenback provision of the Thomas amendment and end the President's power further to devalue the dollar. If Congress should declare its independence in this fashion and deliver these accomplished facts to the President when he returns from his fishing trip, the lift to the country's spirits, the restoration of hope and confidence throughout the nation would be beyond measuring. Nine days is too long to wait in any crisis. Let Congress say so to the President by acting now!—New York Tribune.

CARRYING WATER ON BOTH SHOULDERS

When one glances back over political and financial events of the past six years they are prone to wonder what is the "difference between tweedle dee and tweedle dum". When Mr. Hoover was in office the many mouthpieces through which Mr. Michelson found expression in his "smear Hoover" campaign, said the latter was to blame for the "great depression". But now with Mr. Roosevelt in office when the government-controlled stock market takes a big nose dive and business goes into a tail spin like it did in 1929—this is only a "recession".

During this so-called "recovery period" of the past three years the federal government by currency inflation and a program of scarcity h[illegible] boosted cost of commodity prices. And at t[illegible] same time there has been a constant Whi[illegible] House demand for a building boom. To expect sane individuals to pay high prices for materials and high prices for construction labor to build houses while the real estate market remains in the doldrums, just simply doesn't add up to make sense. Another case of carrying water on both shoulders which has been so frequently attempted by the adroit New Dealers in Washington.

Willford King, professor of economics in New York University in a recent article discusses some of this paradoxical government viewpoint. Prof. King says:

Until recently the advocates of a planned economy were favored by fortune in that the cyclical movement of business was steadily upward. They could and did claim credit for every increase in wages and profits.

Now that the tide has turned these same New Dealers have been virtually compelled to choose between two policies. They might revise their former attitude and deny that government has any control over the movements of business. On the other hand, they might adhere to their former position and attempt to demonstrate their ability to check the business decline.

Several Lines of Attack

Apparently, before planning his campaign, the president turned to his Bible for counsel, and it opened at the text "Let not thy left hand know what the right hand doeth", for, on the one hand we see Secretary Morgenthau pleading for a balanced budget and promising no new taxes, and on the other hand we observe the President and Congress planning to adopt a farm subsidy program which will call for additional expenditures running into hundreds of millions.

Following the same rule, the President calls upon business to hire more labor with a view of relieving unemployment, but, at the same time, he urged Congress to pass a wages-and-hours bill which will inevitably increase costs of production and hence selling prices of products, thereby reducing sales volume and producing additional unemployment.

The armchair advocates of state socialism have always pictured a planned economy managed by scientific principles and therefore operating with an efficiency unheard of under a competitive regime. The contrast between the system thus pictured and the one which we see in operation is enlightening, even of disappointing.

Voice of Experience

Our present planners blithely defy the law of supply and demand and believe they can raise the price of labor an hour and still sell more of it. The voice of experience reminds them of "the horse-and-buggy days", and hence is scorned.

For example, experience says that it is unsafe to lend on real estate more than half its value. Now it is proposed to finance a huge housing program by having the government guarantee loans covering 90 per cent of the value. This means that buyers could secure homes merely by paying a year's rent in advance.

The probabilities would be that, without making any further payments, they could thereafter live in the homes for several years before being

27,000 [illegible]ds in New Farm Bill For[illegible]ch to Understand

[illegible]OLLIVAN

T[illegible] been introduced. It is before the Senate. [illegible]ds.

The [illegible]tains ninety-seven pages of about 270 words each—about 27,000 words. That is a lot of words. When the reading clerk of the Senate was rattling the bill off on Tuesday I did not time him. Two hundred words a minute would be a fairly rapid pace. If the reading clerk was hitting it up at that rate the reading would take upward of two hours. (Incidentally, it was observed that after the reading clerk had been going for twenty minutes there were just ten Senators, out of ninety-six, on the floor, and practically all seemed to have occupations or preoccupations other than listening to the bill.)

But the reading clerk was just reading the bill, just pronouncing the words. He was not trying to understand it. At least, I don't think he could have tried to understand it—if he did, I apologize. To read the bill and understand it would take more than two hours. I have been at it more than two hours and I have hardly made a beginning.

I am tempted to say that no one understands the bill. But I can't say that. It is clear that the members of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, or some of them, understand it and are to be congratulated for their hard work and patience. Here and there throughout the original draft (as written, I presume, by some New Dealer in triple-A) are passages with lines drawn through them. Those are provisions which the Senate committee would not accept.

Almost one-tenth of the 27,000 words is devoted to "marketing quotas for wheat and corn." I have read this part carefully. But reading what this bill says is not enough to understand fully what is being attempted. For this bill is tied up with the soil conservation laws and with other laws. But within the part of the present bill dealing with wheat and corn are some remarkable provisions.

What A. A. A. is after is control of farming, of all farms and all farmers. They are after government control, the same type of control that is practiced in Germany, Russia and Italy. But they know Congress, at this stage, won't give them arbitrary control over the farmer. So they have rigged up a device which they call a referendum.

They will conduct a referendum of farmers who raise wheat. The question will be, in effect: "Do you want the government to dictate to each of you how much wheat you may raise for sale on your own farm, and penalize you if you raise more?"

Only, of course, the question will not be phrased quite so candidly as that. The whole thing will be sugar-coated. To get the farmer to vote "Yes," he will be promised something. The bill provides that if the farmer will accept a quota, the government will make cash payments to him and lend money to him. But no quotas, no cash. (Triple A has other ways of persuading farmers to vote "Yes" and accept quotas which there is not space to describe here.)

Very well. Two-thirds of the farmers vote "Yes." Thereupon—I quote the pending bill:

"The Secretary shall . . . fix the quantity of the commodity (wheat), which may be marketed from the farm."

Now they've got the farmer hooked. Every farmer—not merely the ones who voted "Yes," but all of them. They have all got to accept quotas, no matter how they voted or whether they voted at all.

"I can't, hey," replies Mr. Wallace; "You just wait—I'll see you later in Federal Court." And Mr. Wallace walks down the lane looking the way a man of natural kindliness looks when he tries to be a dictator and doesn't really like the role.

Where do I get that about "Federal courts?" It's right there in the bill. It rests on two provisions. The first says:

"It shall be an unfair agricultural practice for any farmer . . to market wheat . . . in excess of his farm marketing quota . . ."

And for this "unfair agricultural practice" I can be haled into court. Read the provision, Section 22 (C) of the bill:

"Whenever . . . the Secretary has reason to believe that any farmer has engaged in any unfair agricultural practice . . . and so certifies to the appropriate District Attorney of the United States, it shall be the duty of the District Attorney . . to institute a civil action in the name of the United States for the recovery of the penalty payable with respect to the violation."

And there is still another way by which you can find yourself in court, criminal court. That is Section 22 (E):

"Farmers engaged in the production of wheat . . . shall furnish such proof of their acreage, yield, storage, and marketing . . . in the form of records, marketing cards, reports . . . or otherwise as may be . . . prescribed by regulations of the Secretary. Any farmer failing to furnish such proofs . . . shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof be subject to a fine of not more than $100."

That is part of what the wheat portion of the crop control bill provides. The provisions about other crops are similar. I think I have stated it accurately. If I have made any error, I hope Mr. Wallace or his alert publicity men will correct me. The country needs to know just what is in this bill, and just what it means. We want to know now, before the bill is passed.

The Stalled Mechanism of Prosperity

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Many members of Congress must be asking themselves whether the clamor for revision of the undistributed profits and of the capital gains taxes is in fact inspired by a true diagnosis of the business recession or is propaganda by the rich desiring to escape their taxes. It is important to find the answer to this question. For we may readily assume that most Congressmen are honestly in doubt, that they really do wish to do what needs to be done to resume recovery, but that they do not wish to be bamboozled into relieving the rich at the expense of the poor.

For those who mean to study this question seriously there is no better introduction, I think, than the data assembled by Mr. Carl Snyder and published by him in the American Economic Review (June, 1936) under the title "The Capital Supply and National Well-Being." Mr. Snyder is a statistician of the very first rank, and he is, besides, a man of the highest scientific integrity. His study was years in the making, and it was not put together as an argument in the present controversy.

Mr. Snyder's data cover more than a hundred years of American economic development, and they reveal certain relationships which, if true, are of the greatest practical importance at the present time. His figures show that for more than a century, taking averages for five or ten year periods, the national wealth, the national income, the physical quantity of goods manufactured, and the amount of capital invested in manufacturing, have increased at about the same even rate. In the thirty or forty years up to 1930 the total industrial product has increased at about 4 per cent a year, compounded. During the same period the annual increase of capital invested has been about 5 or 5½ per cent, compounded.

This does not look like a large annual addition to capital. But Mr. Snyder demonstrates, and I do not see how his reasoning can be challenged, that it is precisely on this addition to the supply of capital that the American industrial development has depended.

The next question is where the supply of capital has come from, and it is the answer to this question that throws the greatest light upon the present tax discussion. The greater part of the supply has not come, as many might suppose, from the sale of securities by bankers to investors. It has come out of profits which were plowed back into the business.

The case of Henry Ford is no doubt extreme. But it illustrates the method by which most enterprises have developed. According to Mr. Snyder, the only outside capital Mr. Ford ever received was about $29,000 when he first started. By 1928 Ford Motors could have been capitalized and sold for a thousand million dollars. During the preceding thirty years the gross income of the company was over twelve thousand million dollars, and yet out of that huge sum there was distributed to shareholders only about 1 per cent. The other 99 per cent of the Ford receipts have been plowed back.

No doubt this is an unusual ratio. But nevertheless it is essentially true that the industries of America have financed their own development. The general rule among well managed corporations has been to pay out in dividends one-half of the net annual surplus—the rule being "a dollar for dividends and a dollar for betterments."

Now if it is true that prosperity depends on the supply of capital and if the capital supplied comes principally from plowing back profits, then it is clear that the present tax laws are in fact a devastating blow to our industrial development. For the purpose and the effect of the undistributed profits tax are to prevent the plowing back of profits and to compel business men to go to the bankers when they need new capital.

In theory there is a great deal to be said for the principle of this tax, and I am disposed to believe that in the long run the system of corporate business would be sounder if the big corporations had to go into the open market for their new capital. But this involves a radical change in the financial mechanism of business, and unless it is introduced very gradually and cautiously, the result is bound to be a stoppage of the capital supply.

The present law is neither gradual nor cautious. It performs a surgical operation on the heart of business and it does the operation with a meat ax. There can be little doubt that right here, in this tax, we have a principal cause of the failure of private investment to replace public spending.

What seems to have happened is this: For a hundred years the normal way of supplying business with capital has been to plow back profits. Suddenly the New Deal abolished this method of financing business by levying a punitive tax. Suddenly it had created a new system which made it necessary for business men to get their capital through the bankers from private capitalists.

But at the same time, not content with abolishing the old system, the New Deal also made it almost impossibly difficult to operate the new system. By its method of taxing capital gains a big private investor must give up most of his profits. But he cannot get much relief if he makes losses. That does not provide [illegible] By the new laws governing investment banking, sound though they are in principle, the machinery for issuing securities has been greatly weakened. By certain of the more drastic regulations of the Stock Exchanges, the market for capital has been made narrow and thin. By the severity of the surtaxes on incomes the incentive to invest has been greatly diminished. By continuing to pour out tax exempt bonds the rich were provided with a refuge but business was deprived of their capital.

Thus at the moment when the undistributed profits tax had made business more than ever dependent on the bankers, on the stock market and on the rich capitalists, the other New Deal reforms shut off the supply of capital from these very sources. The net result has been to prevent business from financing its own development out of profits and to prevent it from drawing easily upon private investors.

In this way the central mechanism of prosperity has been stalled. And that is almost certainly the principal reason why the recovery collapsed as soon as the government's inflationary spending ceased

County Attorney Drake Explains Justice of Peace Fee System

Section 43 of the Village Law empowers a board of trustees of a village to create the office of police justice. It is not mandatory, however, and I am informed that the village of Canisteo has not done so.

Sections 180 and 182 of the village law provides that when the office of police justice has been created, such police justice shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all misdemeanors committed within the village and all violations of village ordinances. In such cases, the fines or penalties are paid to the village treasurer. Paid policemen on a village force are paid salaries and hence no fees are audited and paid. Fees of constables in misdemeanor cases are, however, audited and paid by the village board as an offset against the fines received.

When the office of police justice has not been created, then a justice of the peace of the town has jurisdiction over not only misdemeanors committed within the village, but also violations of village ordinances (Section 180 Village Law). In misdemeanor cases, the fines are paid to supervisor of the town and in cases of violation of village ordidances, the fines or penalties are paid to the village treasurer.

A paid village policeman is not entitled to fees from the town, but the town board do audit the fees earned by such policeman and the fees are paid to the village treasurer to offset the salaries paid by the village. In cases of violations of a village ordinance, the paid policeman receives no fees from the village and none are audited by the town board, because the fine or penalty has been paid into the village treasury. A constable receives the fees for himself in misdemeanor cases, from the town board, and in cases of violations of village ordinances, from the village board. The town or village receiving the fines, pays the fees.

Perhaps the confusion has arisen due to the amendment of 1936 to the town law, when Section 102 sub. 11 was amended to read that the town board no longer pays the fees of a police officer, when the misdemeanor was committed within the village and the "office of police justice has been created". This new subdivision has no application until the village creates the office of police justice. In fact, it is no change whatever in the previous law as given in the village law. It simply makes the town law now read the same as the village law has always provided. In the recent decision of Mr. Justice Wheeler in the mandamus proceeding brought against the town of Bath by deputy sheriff Lawrence Shoemaker to recover fees in misdemeanor cases committed within the incorporated village of Bath, he said:

"Section 102 sub. 11 of the town law as added in 1936, has been called to the attention of the court in connection with the propriety of paying any fees on account of offenses committed within the village. It is merely a statutory enactment of the law as it stood after the enactment of Section 187 of the village law, and does not make any change in existing law".

In that case Mr. Shoemaker sought to recover fees of the town, which had received the fines, even though the offense was committed within the incorporated village of Bath, and the court directed the town board to audit and pay.

In my opinion, that, in order for fines to be paid into the village treasury in misdemeanor cases committed within the village, the office of police justice must be created. Then, the town no longer receives the fine and no longer pays the fees of constables in such cases, and no longer pays the village treasurer the fees earned by paid village policemen.

Carrying Water on Both Shoulders

ousted by foreclosure proceedings. The government would then have on its hands a great number of rundown dwellings which could not be sold until they had been rehabilitated at heavy expense, and it would therefore find itself sunk still deeper into the debt quagmire.

Those responsible for the housing program persistently refuse to face the fact that the legitimate way to sell more houses is to cut their selling prices, and that, to do this, it is essential to reduce building costs by having building workers work many more hours weekly at rates per hour much lower than those set by the union scales . . .

Whether Mr. Roosevelt has discovered this fact yet, or not the man in the street is coming to see some light even in this new depression—recession, call it what you will. He sees that not even the President is dextrous enough to carry water on both shoulders for very far. There is bound to be a spill on one side or the other. And just as surely this country cannot go on half democratic and half socialistic. Free competition and the totalitarian state won't mix.

Music Course in AHS Introduced By Sprague

Glenn Sprague, musical director in the Addison High School, is training a group of young musicians from the third through the seventh grades.

Many parents would like to know if their children have musical talent and ability but feel the expense of buying an instrument for experimental purposes is too much. With this in mind, Mr. Sprague has secured reductions on a musical instrument called a "saxette".

On this instrument he can teach a child the scales, tone quality, pitch, tongue and finger control and other musical points. These instruments are priced very reasonable and in this manner it can be quickly and cheaply determined if a child has any musical talent.

Practice on this instrument will perfect the student in music reading and instrumentation and if the child or parents desire to further the child's musical education later, more advanced and expensive instruments may be purchased for the life-long edification of the child growing into adulthood with some knowledge and appreciation of music.

In the first week of registration for this new course in music over 45 students in the lower grades have secured the consent of their parents for this work. The goal is 60 in order to form a class. It is the desire of Mr. Sprague to have these young people give a concert later in the year to show what can be done in musical education with the primary students.

Christmas Seal Sale is Urged By Governor

With the approach of the holiday season, the public again is afforded opportunity to join, effectively and in the true spirit of Christmas, in the war against tuberculosis, still one of the chief causes of death among persons between fifteen and forty-five. Christmas seals are sold to obtain funds so necessary to the carrying on of measures of prevention and cure.

The Seal Sale movement, instituted in 1907, has become a most helpful influence in the steady campaign against the disease.

This year there is a great need for the cooperation of all in making the sale successful. The National Tuberculosis Association, in its most recent report, discloses an increase of the disease after ten years of steady recession.

The decrease in the death rate of nearly 75 per cent since 1900 demonstrates that adequate facilities can greatly reduce prevalence of the disease. Not yet has there been provided sufficient means for scientific study, education, sanitoria, clinics and home care. There are long waiting lists at the hospitals and a vast field yet to be served in preventive work despite the forward strides of private and public health agencies.

Now, therefore, I, M. William Bray, Lieutenant Governor and Acting Governor of the State of New York, urge citizens to buy Christmas Seals as generously as possible thus adding needed resources to the great crusade for health and better living.

I believe there can be no more helpful or satisfying expression of the Christmas spirit than the bringing of health and restored hope to afflicted men, women and children, the great majority of whom are of very limited means. Volunteer citizen forces, financed by Christmas seals and allied with public health agencies, are yearly saving the lives of many men, women and children, and restoring others to their normal places in society.

ANNOUNCES CHRISTMAS CLUB PAYMENT

RAY S. BROWN,
President First National Bank

National Bank Christmas Club Fund is $3700

Christmas club checks amounting to nearly $3,700 will be mailed from the Addison National Bank sometime during the first week in December, according to a statement to this paper by Ray S. Brown, president. These checks will surpass those of last year by nearly $1,000.

For the past 15 years the bank has maintained Christmas club funds for depositors and each year the amount left by depositors has been increasing. The checks will be mailed to 110 persons in the banking area of the First National.

This form of saving means that many families and individuals, by saving small sums weekly, will have extra money at Christmas time for the unusual seasonal expenditures. And, in most cases, the small sums stored in the bank have not been missed by the depositing individual. It surprises most people when they save money and realize what small sums, systematically stored away, may mean over a period of time.

FOLLOWING A GREAT SUNDAY-SCHOOL LEADER

Mr. Moody and His Famous Sunday School Pony

CHICAGO—The middle years of the last century found in Chicago a youth destined to become one of the world's outstanding characters in Christian achievement—Dwight L. Moody. While forging to the front in the shoe business, he was giving more and more time and effort to Y.M.C.A., mission, and Sunday-school work. The year 1937 has marked the one hundredth anniversary of his birth.

It is an appalling revelation that in America thirty-six million youth and adolescents are outside the church and Sunday-school, with no Christian influences or instruction shaping their lives. In his day D. L. Moody took seriously the condition of children about him. Hence the building up of what became the largest Sunday school in Chicago, with John V. Farwell as a co-worker and President Lincoln a visitor.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, founded by Mr. Moody in 1886, has promoted Centenary Celebrations during the year in many American and British cities, and has also sponsored a Moody Day on the Sunday nearest to the great evangelist's birth date (Feb. 5) for the past two years. Taxes Cited as Business Barrie[illegible]

WASHINGTON (IPS)—Until federal tax laws are revised depression will be an ever present threat, Morris S. Tremaine, for 10 years comptroller of New York State, warned government tax experts on a recent official visit here.

He specifically blamed the present general slowing up of business and the recent stock market slump on federal taxes, especially those on undistributed corporation income and on capital gains and losses.

"No new business of any account has started in the last five years," he declared. "There is no new enterprise. These taxes prevent the little fellow from developing a reserve sufficient to expand his business."

"Just think," Mr. Tremaine added, "Ford started with a capitalization of about $28,000 and built up his business from earnings. Practically all the large corporations today were built up from earnings. Now the undistributed income tax prohibits the small man from applying his earnings constructively."

George Croft, 52, died Tuesday afternoon, November 30, at his home in Eagle Hotel of pneumonia after an illness of two weeks. How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-eddressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Rusty Hot Water Pipes

Mrs. J. F., writes: "We have a water pressure system using spring water and have much trouble with rusty water in the hot water pipes which are galvanized iron.

"Even though the tank is flushed out, in a few days it is rusty again. The system has been in use five years. How can we get rid of the rust"?

Professor B. B. Robb of the Agricultural engineering department answers that since the equipment is galvanized iron and the system only a few years old, the water must be quite soft.

"Different kinds of water affect different kinds of pipes in various ways. Water that is very soft, for instance, is more likely to attack the zinc coating on galvanized pipe and expose the iron or steel beneath than water that tends to be hard.

"Installation of a copper range boiler and copper water tubing, at least for the hot water system, is probably desirable. Copper tubing is now generally available on the market.

Spring or Fall?

J. V., writes: "I plan to put out some Cornell pasture mixture next year. Should I do this in the spring with oats or seed it on wheat in the fall?"

Professor G. H. Serviss of the agronomy department replies: "Spring is the time to sow it, but results are better if it is seeded alone rather than with oats. If sown with oats, the oats should, by all means, be pastured off. Additional information has been sent to you."

Uncl Ab says the passing of the depression is shown by the amateur farmers passing back to the city.

Avoca—Miss Anna Jones, Home Economics teacher in the Avoca High School is going to conduct classes for adults in the school to enable women of the community to get caught up on the latest cooking and household kinks.

I Pick 'em Up

TRUE STORIES OF HITCH HIKERS

by L. ELLIS EVONS

Dollar a Year Man

A rather slightly built fellow about 35, weary and discouraged looking, stood on the side of a road heading south out of Philadelphia. With a look that seemed to say, "I am only wasting my time," he gave a weak-looking wave of his hand in the direction I was going.

I willingly give lifts to fellows by themselves, give them a quick glance and decide in an instant whether to accommodate or not. I decided in his favor.

Giving him a chance to get settled in the seat beside me, I shot my usual question at him. "Well fellow, where are you headed and what is it all about?" If anyone I pick up cannot carry on a conversation and tell me something worth while, I feel that I have just wasted my seat and am glad to have him get out.

This hiker was not to disappoint me. He thanked me earnestly, saying, he had walked from a northern point in the city which I knew was fully ten mi[illegible] back. No wonder he was foot-sore and weary. He handed me a letter saying "This will explain everythin[illegible] I think." Stopping for a traffic signal red light, I had a chance t[illegible] read it. The letter was typewritten on a printed letterhead of a New York Cafe. It was an introduction to a business man in New York, giving the name of my new acquaintance, saying that he had been just released from the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisberg, Pa. and asking the man to give "this poor fellow a chance" and was signed with the name "Jack Dempsey" and in pen and ink "Jack."

"Well," I said, "this is a little unusual, but I do not condemn you; tell me all about it."

"I am not going to make excuses" he said. "I did wrong and paid for it. I was a postal clerk and had not been working in the postoffice at W——— very long when I met up with a couple of fellows in a pool room. I don't know how I came to fall for their scheme, as I had never done anything wrong before in my life. They seemed so sure of themselves that they persuaded me to join in their plan to rob the mail. My share was to be $25,000, they on the outside, me on the inside. Well, to make a long story short, the plan had a weak spot, they were arrested and told of the part I was playing. They arrested me and at the trial I could not offer any defense and just put myself at the mercy of the court. Some mercy—only ten to twenty years and a heavy fine. I realized it was no one's fault but my own, so I just took my medicine. I have paid my debt and want a chance to make a living. When they let me out they gave me a suit of clothes and a ten dollar bill, I served ten years, one dollar for each year. A dollar a year man.

"I knew Jack Dempsey before all this happened and headed for New York, hopeful he could give me something to do. he told me how the waiters and all his other help belonged to the union and that it was impossible to employ me in his restaurant and gave me the letter you just read.

"It was no use, I tried a number of places and that ten dollars was going fast. My only chance was to get to Washington, D. C. where I have a brother. I walked and thumbed my way to where you picked me up, my money is gone and I have missed two meals.

"My destination was Wilmington, Del. and as it was about 6 o'clock in the evening I took him into a restaurant and we ate a hearty meal together. There he told me of conditions in the prison.

"The prisoners work in the shops and are making metal furniture to replace all the wooden things in the government offices. These fellows work at jobs that are paying good money on the outside, but they do not get anything in cash at all. If they would only give them five or ten cents a day, they would have a few dollars to go on when they get out, until they could find somethng to do." Certainly ten dollars will not see a man very far, no wonder they think the world is against them. He gave me his brother's address. I paid the meal check and gave him a dollar and wished him God speed as he disappeared into the night.

T.B. Threatens Young Women

Leading Statistician States Latest Facts On This Serious Situation

"Leading tuberculosis authorities call tuberculosis the foe of youth," says Miss Jessamine S. Whitney, statistician of the National Tuberculosis, "but I go even further and call it the foe of girls and young women. Why? Because the deaths from tuberculosis among them are one and one-half times as many as those among their brothers of the same age."

The death rate from tuberculosis has been cut to less than one-third of what it was thirty years ago when it was the leading cause of death. Yet when we analyze these deaths we find that tuberculosis is still the leading cause of death for men and women between 15 and 45 years of age and we also find that among young women between 15 and 30 one in every four deaths is from this highly contagious disease.

Miss Whitney in answering why tuberculosis is twice as prevalent among young women as among young men says, "No one knows. Today it is an outstanding mystery in public health."

In an attempt to solve this mystery the National Tuberculosis Association made a careful study of the life histories of all girls between 15 and 25 who died from tuberculosis in a single year in Detroit and in New York City. Industrialization did not affect their health because 35 per cent had never been employed outside their homes and 2[illegible] per cent had been employed less than a year Dieting, clothing habits their educational levels were also discarded as clues to the mystery. A recent study of one of the New York City tuberculosis clinics did show, however, that the young women who lived in homes where there was a person sick with tuberculosis were very remiss in getting proper examination of themselves.

"Every case of tuberculosis comes from another," Miss Whitney further says. "We know that our chief concern for the present, therefore, is to make mothers and fathers realize the necessity of having their daughters go to the doctor for periodic physical examinations. If we can catch the disease early we can nearly always cure it. Do this," concludes Miss Whitney, " and we tuberculosis statisticians can all go out of business. This public health mystery will have solved itself."

F. F. A. CHAPTER CHATTER

The county agriculture teachers and the teachers of home economics held their monthly meeting in Addison December 1. The wives of the teachers of agriculture were also guests at the meeting. After a group dinner at the Eagle Hotel the groups retired to the high school building where separate meetings were held.

These meetings of the "Ag" teachers are held monthly and are rotated among the schools of the county. The purpose of these meetings is to discuss current problems that affect the teaching of agriculture.

Problems discussed last night were report of the committee on revision of plans for the county fair; discussion of the liability insurance problem for teachers and boards of education; and the approval of the 1937-38 F. F. A. basketball schedule.

Dr. Cunningham of Cornell University who was to speak on the use of his new farm management book was unable to be present, instead Harry Mullen of the Addison Advertiser gave a short talk on news writing for agriculture departments.

Schools represented were: Avoca, Bath, Bradford, Campbell, Corning Northside, Hammondsport, Jasper, Greenwood, Troupsburg, Prattsburg, Savona and Addison.

Who are the boys who wanted to go to Westfield and take "Ag" because they have two girls in the "Ag" department there?

The local agriculture department has joined the Steuben County Farm Bureau for the coming year. The "Ag" schools throughout the county receive much aid from the Farm Bureau both by keeping up-to-date on changes in agriculture and also by attending meetings where extension specialists are used.

Mr. Finnerty of the local department called on J. Paul Green of Trumansburg last Sunday. Mr. Green formerly taught at Corning Northside High School and is now in charge of the teacher training division of Cornell University.

Harold Wheaton, a post graduate student of the Addison High School and of the agriculture department has been elected master of the Hedgesville Grange for the coming year.

The first basketball game for the F. F. A. team will be played on the old gym floor on Wednesday, December 8 with the Savona Aggies as the opponents. Little is known about this year's Savona team but they usually have a strong offense which gives the locals plenty of trouble. The local team is the poorest ever to represent the department, graduation having broken up last year's winning combination. Oakden and Phillips, the forwards, have gone and no one has been found to replace either of these men. Lyle Johnson and Curtis Miller, regular guards of last year, are also missing, Curtis having graduated last January and Lyle in June. Harold Wheaton, who took Miller's place at guard, is not out for basketball, hence five first string men have to be replaced. Long is the only member of last year's team who is playing this season. Little effort is being spent on this year's team is it seems impossible to develop a winner this season, however, the cutlook for the future is exceedingly bright because this year's freshmen class is one of the best ever to report for basketball.

The Greenwood High Schooll which has installed a new department of agriculture this past year has asked the members of the local chapter to put on an F. F. A. meeting there in the near future. Plans for organizing an F. F. A. chapter are underway at Greenwood.

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

Leo Bolley's All Up-State Team

FOOTBALL'S most dramatic season in years has come to its close except for the many post-season bowl games. And now it's time to honor the heroes of 1937.

I have picked two first teams for my All Up-State rankings instead of a first and second. One team is limited to the men of New York's Big Three—Cornell, Syracuse and Colgate. The other is composed of players from the so-called smaller college ranks. The honorary coaches were named on the basis of what they accomplished with their material in a short time.

In rating the players, I talked with almost all of the coaches and most of the officials, and, of course, I saw many of the boys in action myself. I also received much valuable advice from the fans who follow my radio programs and newspaper columns.

Holland, McKeever and Lalor made the team for the second consecutive year.

Alab[illegible] and California will participate in the football game you will hear on your radio New Year's day if you listen to the Rose Bowl tournament. This is the favored New Year's game. However, candidates are being selected for the Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans and for the Orange Bowl game in Florida. There are many candidates for the two last named.

Over 102,000 persons sat in the pouring rain Saturday to see an underdog Army mule trim the Navy [illegible]'s sails to the tune of 6 to 0. [illegible]e game was not marked with the usual ceremonies owing to the weather but everyone of any importance in Army or Navy circles and in the sporting fraternity of the east was present.

Fordham trimmed New York University in a traditional game Saturday. The game gave the Fordham ram an unbeaten season but a scoreless tie game with the Pittsburgh panthers for the third year, robs them of Rose Bowl bid.

—o—

Bill Terry was quite incensed in his characteristic manner when told that rumors had reached the press of the Giants securing Joe Medwick from the Cards in exchange for Schumaker, Mel Ott and Gus Mancuso. He denied the report emphatically.

Holy Cross is making a bid for national honors as an unscored upon team this season. Two ties, however, have killed their national aspirations.

—o—

The Old Master Willie Hoppe showed he is still master of the billiard cue by defeating the younger Jake Schaffer decisively in the 18.1 balkline match in New York.

Bernard Kelly has relinquished his job as manager of the Syracuse Chiefs. His place will be taken over by Jim Bottomley of the St. Louis Browns.

—o—

Irving Crane, Livonia, is in the national spotlight by virtue of his tying Ralph Greenleaf in the pocket billiards matches recently. Crane will oppose Andrew Ponzi, former world champion.

—o—

Al Van Ranst, right tackle, will captain the Cornell football team next season. He is called "the sixty-minute player" on the squad.

An unusual feature of the Army-Navy gridiron at Philadelphia Saturday was the fact that the grass had been dyed, yes dyed, by a chemist of the Agricultural Department. And the color did not run even in the rain.

The home was destroyed by fire Memorial Day and has not been rebuilt since. Dr. Shaut has purchased the lot and what remains of the building. He intends making an apartment house.

Workmen are now engaged in tearing out burned parts of the old building and lumber has been delivered to the site for the erection of a new building on the old foundation.

Alfred Basketball Squad Due For Tough Season

Alfred, Dec. 2—Twenty courtmen, vanguard of Coach Alex Yunevich's Alfred University basketball team, began workouts this week at Davis gymnasium.

Only four lettermen appeared for practive. Four other veterans and a dozen sophomores complete the squad with which the Saxons must face a 16-game schedule.

The season opens December 4 against Hartwick. Coach Yunevich is not optimistic about the chances of the team against opponents like Brooklyn, Cornell, Clarkson and St. Lawrence.

The "SOS" trio of Shoemaker, Oberhanick and Schachter, which graduated in June, was the biggest loss to the Alfred team. Lettermen expected to fill these gaps include Ray Buckley of Valley Stream, Dick Brownell of Salamanca, Ken Vance of Arcade and Eugene Keefe of Yonkers.

Other veterans are Joe Proe of Elmira, Dighton Polan of Brookfield, Crandall Cowles of Richburg, Ken Getman of Albany.

Alfred Frosh Basketeers Are Under Hewson

District Scout Leader Schools Open Monday

Rev. D. C. Means, Boy Scout Commissioner, calls special attention of all Scouters and those interested in scouting of a three-night training course which began in Canisteo and Westfield Monday and Tuesday nights, November 29 and 30. The course entitled "Elements of Scout Leadership, Part One" is being conducted by E. F. "Randy" Randolph, Field Scout Executive, Steuben Area Council. The course has been developed to aid Scout Masters, Assistant Scout Masters and Troop Committeemen in their work with troops. The attendance at the first meetings of the course was good and commissioner Means urges that anyone who missed the first meeting may attend the last two meetings. The dates for remaining two meetings are: Canisteo, Monday nights December 6 and 13; Westfield, Tuesday nights December 7 and 14.

Courses are being held in the American Legion rooms in both towns. The hour is 7:30.

Commissioner Means emphasizes there is no expense, no equipment necessary, and that all men completing the required six hours of training will receive certificates and credit toward the Scout Masters Key.

The next two meetings will be built around the themes: "The Troop and Its Setup" and "Using the Program of Scouting". "Randy" makes use of the Patrol Method throughout the course which gives opportunity for group discussion; group singing; patrol projects; troop and patrol activities and a spirit of all around good fellowship.

Interesting and instructive exhibits of Scouting literature, projects and activities will be on display at each session.

It is not necessary to enroll in advance for the course.

I suppose many of you have just about completed the turkey and fixings which were so auspiciously started Thanksgiving Day. It sure is surprising what compounds an energetic cook can make to disguise the old bird.

—o—

Altho I have seen it many times I am always somewhat taken back when a person professing a certain religious belief deserts this belief, temporarily, to be a good fellow in a mixed crowd. Somehow my respect for that person goes down. And yet you accuse them of not being what they profess and a good old-fashioned fight is awaiting you.

—o—

I have been quite concerned by editorials and news stories and magazine articles on the liquor question of late. It seems that all writers point to the fact that present actions of the liquor interests are pointing to a return of an even more strict prohibition than we had before. Some of these liquor interests have taken cognizance of this growing trend towards local option and are putting the thumbs down on liquor sales to juveniles, Sunday openings, selling to women at the bar and to people already intoxicated.

I personally am not in favor of any form of prohibition but it is a certainty that if present conduct of some liquor dealers is continued, they are preparing their own graves and will be out of business in short order. Local option is a powerful thing and I would hate to see it administered in any form in Steuben County.

—o—

Have heard some complaints from some of the merchants during the past week relative to being rather sick and tired of outsiders coming into the community, putting on some sort of stunt and then departing leaving the grief here. It seems to some of them that the small town merchants are made the goat for such stunts much more than their brother merchants in larger communities.

Incidentally I wish more people would write ideas to me or to the paper. If you don't want your name published that is alright with us. During the past week I have heard criticism of various articles written in the paper and in this column. I wish people would write or tell me about their objections, for I realize I cannot always be right and am wrong many times.

The originator of the Christmas club idea sure had something there. I notice vacation clubs and other like ideas are stealing the "saving small sums weekly" idea from the Christmas club originators. And it sure is surprising how small sums will grow into larger ones.

—o—

My parents gave me a name several years ago and I have carefully preserved it, nurtured it and cared for it as best I could. And in addition I have tried to build a character to fit that name. The whole life's work was knocked into a cocked hat Saturday afternoon when a young urchin on the street spoke respectfully as follows, "How do you do Professor Willson". I think Bernard owes me an apology.

—o—

Half the joy of life is in little things taken on the run. Let us run if we must—even the sands do that—but let us keep our hearts young and our eyes open that nothing worth our while shall escape us. And everything is worth its while if we only grasp it and its significance.—Victor Cherbuliez.

This column, the news columns and editorial columns of this and other papers have eternally been writing against the person who sends unsigned communications to the papers. I realize that people desire to remain anonymous and will help them insofar as I can, but as an evidence of good faith, I must know that some real person is writing the letter, not a crank or practical joker. Papers have been in trouble for printing things without knowing the writer, for the paper is responsible for everything that goes in.

Three communications were received this week, none with names and all pertaining to the same thing. It is not fair to ask us to assume responsibility for writings not our own, for we have trouble enough defending our own writings. Please sign your letters and if you do not want your name to appear in the paper, append a note to your letter saying so and we will leave the name out.

Meetings Planned

Other items of the dairy program, according to chairman Burton Ketch, are a two-day feeding school to be held at Cohocton December 20 and 21, the annual dairy convention and banquet to be held later in the winter, and a tour to some of the better herds in the county in mid-summer.

Cohocton will again entertain the potato convention. Like last year an effort will be made to bring to this meeting men of national importance in the industry, and a special feature is to be a debate on crop control.

Field tests of varieties, time of planting, and rotation will be continued, and a new set of experiments which will have to do with the lime content of the soil as related to yield, will be undertaken. A summer tour is on the program and cooperative seed treatment will be provided if growers favor the plan.

Marketing Featured

The poultry committee selected the improvement of market quality as its major project. The sheep committee plan to hold a sheep day in early spring. The grape committee will study the problem of varieties as related to marketing.

Meetings and services which will be used by thousands of farmers were planned by the conference, attended by Dewitt Stewart, Delbert Norris, Kanona; A. K. Dennis, Jasper, John Briggs, Lewis Osborn, Homer Jones, Fremont; Carl Wellington, Arkport; Burton Ketch, Noah Van Wormer, Wallace; Lyle Hopkins, Phillip Chatfield, Bath; Frank Crandall, Cameron.

Others who participated in the meeting were Ed Westmiller, Lee Edmond, George Mehlenbacher, Cohocton; Leonard Drake, Charles Babcock, Prattsburg; George Fisher, Richard Ellis, Big Creek; Robert Drake, James Scott, Addison; Harlo Atherton, Lloyd Allen, Canisteo; George Quinn, Ira Gibson and Harry Cole, Pulteney; Hildreth Lewis, Wheeler; Olin Sharp, Howard.

Alfred Paper Rates High

Alfred, Dec. 1—Representatives of The Fiat Lux, student weekly newspaper at Alfred University, returned from the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association convention at Bethlehem, Pa., with a cup for first place in the advertising contest.

I. N. A. recognizes about 60 member colleges from the Middle Atlantic States and includes such schools as George Washington, Drexel and Pittsburgh.

"Its advertising is well written and clean", said the judges. "The paper had the foresight to use in its advertising photographs of football players well known to the students, tying up the ad to a forthcoming game thereby attracting reader interest". The award was made by W. D. Barkdull, advertising director of the Washington Herald and Times.

Arrangements For Recreation School

Final arrangements have been completed for the recreation school which will be given in two different centers in the county. All men and women acting as leaders of groups in which recreational meetings need to be planned and supervised are invited to attend. The school will be given first on Thursday, December 9, at the Methodist Church in Canisteo. Ladies of the church will serve a luncheon and all planning to attend should notify the Home Bureau office at Bath not later than Tuesday of that week.

The work will be repeated in the second center on Friday, December 10, at the Methodist Church in Painted Post. Ladies of the church will serve a lunch and reservations for the day's school should be in not later than Wednesday of that week.

All meetings begin at 10 A. M. promptly and will be dismissed between 3:00 and 4:00 P. M. according to the wishes of those in attendance. Schools will be in charge of William M. Smith of the Department of rural Social Organization of the State Department of Agriculture, Cornell University. Group leaders throughout the county are urged to take advantage of these schools which are being sponsored by the Steuben County Home Bureau.

Sunshine, a Provision for Life

Nearly all the energy of the world is furnished by the sun. The sun is a servant to man and seems to have been designed for the promotion and development of life. The Italians have a proverb which says that birth is warm, but death is cold. Every plant of the earth is an engine designed by the Creator to utilize the rays of the sun and to transform the energy thus received and transmit it to support the life of the world. Green plants have outstanding functions: they take the sun's rays and store them away in the form of potential energy in the plant; they make this energy available for animal life. Plants have the power to manufacture starch out of carbon dioxide and water. The process can be carried on successfully only in the sunlight; it is evident, therefore, that the sun's rays are the source of the energy used. The starch manufactured contains in some form the energy used in forming it; this energy may be liberated in an active form when the starch molecule is broken down. The energy stored away in starch is said to be the primary source of energy for nearly all the activities of life with the exception of water power. Plants manufacture far more starch than they need for their own use. The wood, coal, oil, and gas which we use for fuel for power engines can be traced back to plant life, and represents the energy of the sun stored away in plants. The energy stored by the green plants is the source of energy available for animals and men. It is evident that when God created the sun, he was preparing for animal life and human life upon the earth. He made possible the production of wood, coal, oil and gas and starch, and these support and protect life. To believe that all this came about by chance puts a heavier strain on human credulity than to believe the Bible story of a loving heavenly Father who loves and cares for everything he has created.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Christmas Decorations
Lucile G. Smith

Festive decorations are as much a part of the Christmas celebration as are the Christmas tree and the gaily wrapped packages. Everyone likes to anticipate Christmas preparations, and one of the pleasant duties at this season is to plan and construct greens that are to be used throughout the home.

Wreaths for the windows and on the doors to welcome the guests, graceful garlands over the fireplace or on the bannister in the hall, evergreen balls, table decorations and informal bouquets enriched by soft light add cheer that can be obtained in no other way.

All members of the family, both grown-ups and children, can contribute to the decoration of the home. They can first plan the decorations and then spend several hours together in making the pieces to be used.

Cornell has a new bulletin, timely for this season, on making Christmas decorations. It tells how to plan and to make wreaths, bows, trimmings, evergreen roping, sprays and table decorations. Single copies may be had free by writing to the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y. Ask for bulletin E-379.

Rough Times Of Long Ago

Editor, Advertiser:

One hundred years ago last Saturday, November 27, my father was born, in the old Stickney hotel building, two and a half miles up the valley beyond Rathbone.

This old building is pretty well "shot", but not so dilapidated but that it still serves as a habitation for a family at this time. As to how much longer this old building stood there, it is doubtful if any living person knows.

But if this old building, along with the few other remaining old landmarks of this region could talk, no doubt, tall stories would be told of the happenings of those years long past. Of the dense wilderness and howling wolves; and of occasionally a big "cat". And all not so very long after the Indians had been driven out of this region.

But notable of all, was the fact that this Canisteo river valley was, at that time, one of the main thoroughfares for emigrant settlers from the New England states on their way to the "far west"—which in those days meant western New York to Ohio. And long before the Erie R. R. was built. The mode of travel was entirely by wagons, and carrying all the possessions of their owners, on their way to establish new homes in the wilderness.

Here and there along this route were definite stopping places; "taverns" where they would stay all night; and many times, according to legend, would be robbed and made away with and never heard from again. And Addison was one of these very spots. Long after, relatives would come along tracing them up to this and other similar places; and all trace of them lost here. One of the methods employed was to seat the guest at the table with a thin curtain close behind him; and a blow struck with a heavy instrument from behind the curtain, while he was eating.

The site of one of the present day hotels in Addison is where, according to these stories, such things habitually took place.

Whether the old Stickney hotel was one of these places or not is not known, but rough times, free fights and free whiskey were not the exception, but the rule, in those days. Rathbone village had one of the "hell-holes" too.

When we look back to those times we feel that civilization has made some progress, after all—or has it? Grafting trade unionism and its rackets, the thugs and criminals of the cities to-day — there is some doubt as to very much progress, after all. Though crime is only in a different form.

FRENCH HILL

The condition of Mrs. Will Barrett is improved so she has been removed from Bath Hospital to her home here.

Callers at the H. K. Clement home Thanksgiving were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Travis and two daughters of Canisteo and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis of Perry.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Barrett were in Painted Post Sunday to see the former's sister, Mrs. Phil Griffith. They found her somewhat improved so she had been removed from the hospital to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crane entertained the former's brother, Glen Roe and family of Canisteo for Thanksgiving dinner.

The community was shocked to hear of the tragic death of Adam Dimick of Hornell. He was well known here.

John Mack of Bath called on Earl Townsend Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Yarka and Toney Yarka of Ohio have been visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Yarka.

Records show that "big business" generally pays on the farm as well as in the city, and Cornell bulletin E-364 on dairy farm management shows how moderate specilization helps. Single copies of the bulletin may be had free from the New York State College at Ithaca, New York.

Rev. Withey Directs Belmont Campaign

Bolstered by a new confidence in the experienced leadership of Rev. Thomas A. Withey a score of men under the chairmanship of Kenneth Merriman today were ready to begin the annual Boy Scout finance campaign in Belmont on Monday "to give him every support in rejuvenating the Scout program.

"Rev. Withey recently was transferred to the Belmont Episcopal parish from Addison. Born in England the clergyman knew Scouting in its birthplace as a Boy Scout while in the United States he has been actively engaged ever since his arrival in Scouting here. It is because of this outstanding background of experience that Belmont now sees a new Scouting possible for Belmont" said Mr. Merriman.

Father Withey was a commissioner in the Steuben Area council while at Addison. As such he was an integral part of that organization according to Percy L. Dunn, Scout executive in the Steuben council. Now in Seneca Council it is hoped that as soon as Scouting is revitalized in Belmont under his leadership the Rev. Withey may be relieved so as to become associated with executive work in Seneca Council.

"Our growth in Belmont must be a steady consistent one", said Rev. Withey. "And with the support of the people of Belmont there is no doubt in my mind but that our community again can be a leader among the 33 communities of Seneca Council. Scouting has a wonderful program for boys; Scouting builds character and finds the way for the boy to use idle time for useful occupation and development through a program that he himself wants and likes". . . .

Large Corps Army Engineers Study Flood Control at Cornell

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 1—With Federal and State governments giving serious consideration to flood control, the School of Civil Engineering at Cornell University, designed by the U. S. Army engineers as one of the principal research centers in the East is humming with activity this Fall.

The presence of a large staff of U. S. Army Engineers, the building of model dams and flood control units, and the completion of a soil mechanics research laboratory are affording unusual opportunities to students to gain theoretical and practical experience in this important field.

Among the advanced students are fifteen lieutenants in the Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, selected from the highest fifth of last June's graduating class at West Point. At the end of the academic year they will receive the degree of Master in Engineering. Nearly 100 Army Officers have studied here since 1924, but this year's delegation is the largest number sent at one time.

In addition to the hydraulic laboratory facilities of Cornell, maintained in Fall Creek Gorge, the area about the campus having been subjected to the disastrous floods of 1935 and 1936 constitutes a natural laboratory. A district office of the Engineer Corps has been set up here with B. K. Hough, Jr., in charge of a staff of thirty-five civilians. Professor E. W. Schoder, Hydraulics, and other members of the Civil Engineering staff are cooperating with the program.

In a survey of flood control developments, the Cornell Alumni News reports research proceedings in two major directions: problems in channel improvement, construction of check dams, and other water control measures; and studies of foundation conditions and suitable materials for earth embankments and earth dams were needed.

In a new soil mechanics laboratory built by the War Department north of the Agriculture barns and equipped with two car-loads of apparatus from the abandoned Passamaquoddy Dam in Maine, soils of specific sites and other fundamental problems are being studied. The building contains a model basin for the study of shore erosion, of great importance along sandy sea coasts.

Considerable study has already been made of conditions in the Binghamton flood area through the use of the model of the Chenango River which has been in operation for several months in the canal of the Hydraulic Laboratory. Built to scale of 12 inches to 75 feet by army engineers, every tree in the stream, buildings along the banks, and bridges are represented. The river bottom is constructed exactly to scale, and the flow of water in the model is regulated exactly as comparable to the river at its various known stages. The surface level and spread at different points is measured and recorded continuously for flood control study.

Not only will these studies have a practical application in the control of future floods, but they perform an important function in combining theory and practice for future Cornell engineers.

DO YOU REMEMBER, WHEN

The building of the Lincoln highway across the muddy roads of the continent, and the peculiar directions to find where you were at before we had "route number one all the way", and the numbers-game no matter which way we go "to or from"?

The excitement of a great war made it possible to figure out that it was Sunday notwithstanding those "motorless Sundays"?

Kettering invented the self-starter for General Motors cars and reduced the number of cases of broken wrists in this country by about ninety per cent?

The manufacturers out in Detroit figured, thirty years ago, that they would sell their cars to all the people that could afford to buy them in "another year or two", and were wondering what they would do next?

The garage men began to think they had "arrived" because they were competing with blacksmiths?

The butcher used to throw in bones and pieces for the dog, and a chunk of liver?
